The Boutique Hotel Award, founded in 2010 in the U.K., is the first and only international awards scheme exclusively dedicated to recognizing unique excellence among boutique hotels. The award is given to luxury hotels around the world which not only retain their individuality through their small size and keen sense of style and culture but also provide world-class services and facilities and high quality hospitality.

Zeavola Resort is located in the northern part resort area of Phi Phi Island, off the coast of Phuket, the Thailand's famous resort destination, and owns the largest private beach in the area. People from wealthy class from Europe, Australia, and other areas highly evaluates the resort as an eco-friendly nature resort as it is committed to the conservation of natural environment with their efforts such as circulating treatment facility for water resources.
